plete originality for American skill and science in every essential detail.

Having decided to operate, the mode of procedure was very simple. The nail was dissected from the finger to be transplanted, as preliminary to the work which was to follow. By means of two deep incisions, one at the base of each aspect of the nose, two considerable flaps were brought down in such a manner as to form a triangular mass over and about the opening left by the destruction of the nasal boues and cartillages. The next step was by means of the usual incisons to form a pocket at the upper extremity of the nose, into which the end of the transplanted finger was to be insured, and where it was to be usualed in place by Wood's compressor. These and a few other preparatory showments, trifling in themselves, essential to the conception of the operation, were completed. The next and most important step was to lay open the inner aspect of the finger from the second joint to the tip with a single clean and perfect incision, whose walls, composed of minute vessels should suffer a little contusion, and bruising that three would take place with a standard fine manner and vial of sloughing. It was the weeks ago on Saturday that this was to see the same of the should suffer a little contusion and bruising that the one with another similarly free surface would take place with the actilit inflammantion and viak of sloughing. It was five weeks ago on Saturday that film major part of the operation was performed, and the finger placed in position and secured by silver particles and Wood's compressor, the head and trunk of the patient maying tree previously caveloped in a plaster of paris jaket, with the left arm in the proper peation to prevent involuntally displacement. It is needless to say that the work was carried on in an atmosphere permeated and pervaled with antisepetic spray, and that no precaution however alight, essential to insure perfect union of the surfaces, was spared by the operation fulled as there was a possibility that it might, whole column of scientific explanation could not have saved the operator from displacement. It is needless to say that the work was carried on in an atmosphere persested and pervaded with antisepetic spray, and that no precaution, however alight, essential to insure perfect anton of the surraces, was apared by the operating surgest. The secret was very carefully kept for some weaks, also, for bad the operation failed, as there was a possibility that it might, whole column of according explanation could not have saved the operator from becoming as ridiculous in the medical world as he is now likely to be celebrated. The venture was a serious one in many ware, though medicated at he ted. The vanture was a serious one in many wars, though undertaken at the solicitation of a patient, who designed than he would rather lose all the fingers of his int sand in repeated experiments that to contemplate his future in the expedition in which he then were In-

It was scarcely expected that this would stand, as it was impracticable to secure it by autres and, the force of the compressor was insufficient for the purpose. To complicate matters still further, at a critical stage in the person the patient's respiration by ame so embarrased that the jacket had to be split and a silver breathing tube inserted in an incision of the windpie. He has been kept under the influence of morphia constantly, during the progress of the expected union, which had made such progress on Wednesday last that it was decided to litigate one of the arteries of the adherent finger. This was done by means of a silver leading married, who said, without raising the progress of the remaining large vessel will be tied in a day or two, and then the preparations will be nearly complete for the amputation of the inger at the scond joket. It was at fins intended to amputate about the middle of the first phalaxes, but this utilizate metamorphosis in their new position is one that will be observed with keen celentific interest.

After amputation, it will remain to bring down a triangular flap from the surface of the foreshead in such a manner as to furnish a uriorm surface for the ness thus strangely created, and it is possible to the patient leaves the hospital, and returns to the outer world, the here of one of the most extraordinary operation for conjunctivities has materially of coated. A very extraordinary operation, and one that has only one precedent, and no complete parallel in surgical history, is now in progress at Bellevue Hospital. The patient, a young man 21 years of age, had previously been treated for a degeneration of the tissues of the nose, which is described upon the heapital records under the some the some that anomolous term of a lupled like. He was also affilicted with the congenital malformation, familiarly styled the cleft plate, and had a deformity of the lip which caused considerable everaion, and prevented him from holding a cigar or digarcite between his lips. As he was very fond of smoking this state of facts was one that he lamented exceeding. The these troubles, which impaired the function of articulation and materially interfered with the probability of his obtaining remunerative employment, he added a select with the probability of his obtaining remunerative employment, and dead or sindle and semi-purulent surfaces.

The immediate cause of the so-called lupoid ulceration of the nose was a blow with a club, received some years ago, across the nose a little below the bridge. Inflammation and materially united to the hospital, were extensively necrosed. No history of scrofula or or other milgnant desase could be obtained, and the ulceration ultimately vielded to treatment, leaving an usughtly opening, which led directly to the posterior caulities. The vatients physical consistiution was not only good, but rather unusually strong and, previous to the nasal injury for which he was first and the heart of the stream in the heart of the stream is the stream of the stream is the heart of the stream is the fortile with the probability of the solution of articulation and materially interest of the stream is the stream of the stream is the stream in the stream is the stream in the stream is the stream

Not a whit disconterted, but fairly quivering with that hot and exquisite sensation which is born of detective lever alone, the reporter pushed his inquiries and learned from a perfectly reliable source that the bedies had been consigned to Mr. Arch Avery for the Southern medical college at this point, and had been promptly turned over to the functionaries of that new limitiution. It seems that Mr. Avery has a brother in that institution, and it is thought that the whole thing was worked through the whole thing was worked through the for the benealt of the college. The community natually became highly indignant at such conduct in their midst and threatened the couple with a summary punishment in the shape of a coat of tar and feathers. A wild crowd gathered one night to take the house by storm, go the they were forced to retire by the man appearing at the door, who, with revolver in hand, dared the crowd to touch him. The Bennement of Luxury.

An hour before you get up your maid will light your fire, and then screen it with a silver framework lined with rose allk, which will temper the heat and give to the whole mom a sort of rosy morning to the whole room a sort of rocy morning light, that warms while it illumines. Then she will bring you on a silver plate warmer, your cup of chocolate, hot and foaming, which you will drink from the warmer itself, munching the while your rusks, served on a little gold toost rack, kept hot in its term by a little live charcoal, sprinkled with vanilla to perfume the sir.

After you have taken your chocolate you will enough again for a couple of hours. Then you will put on a deshability of the Legislature, the couple of hours. Then you will put on a deshability of the Legislature, when it wanted to admit Republica's to the Legislature, when town officers naglested their duty in making up returns, the option was that blunders should be sufficilly disregarded. That is the kind of judicial talcut they have in Haine, and it is under orders from Blaine, Louisville Charier Journal.

second flooring all about the dressing table. The blinds may be colored to represent "the ardent rays of the sun" and the padding to keep out the Graught is to be trimmed with natural flowers. This will make the place look and feel like a summer bower in the depth of winter. The maid may now "fumigate the nape of the neck" with a little burnt benzoin, to make it supple—an exquisite characteristic provision, for without a supple neck how could a French person possibly get through the duty of politeness for the day?

We must not forget the hands. These may be kept warm by holding in them two little vessels of enamel filled with warm water, and shaped like apples—rather in bad taste in this direction, as tending to remind our Parisienne of the frivolity of taste by which her sex first came to grief. The promised advantage of this arrangement is that it gives the hands that attractive rosiness which warmth alone can impart.

"The wust on it," continued she, "he ain't got a cent, nor he can't make one, nuther."

"Why did you let your daughter take him, then?"

"Well, he come a-dawlin' round sis, an' he'y allus a powder-horn a hangin' on to him; so I just 'lowed he'd a gun, and could keep sis in coons an' possums. She's a master-hand at fresh meat, is my gal! He scraped up two dellars somewhare to get the license with an' to pay the preacher; but I reckon he'll never arn any more."

"Not earn any more!" cried the mistress, incredulously. "What is the matter that he can't work and support your daughter properly?"

Mrs. Spriggle pushed back her bonnet and crossed her knees before she answered. Then she shook her head mourfully.

"I never found out," she said, "till they was done married, as how he'd nary gun at all—nothin' but a powder horn. And," with a gesture of diagust, "he's the powerfullest no account critter ye ever did see."

"You must feel badly to let your daughter go away with such a man."
